

The Kazanski Trilogy

With his novel, The Wolf in Banja Luka, Danish thriller writer Jens Henrik Jensen completed his bestselling trilogy of spy novels featuring CIA agent Jan Jordi Kazanski.

Jens Henrik Jensen took center stage as the exciting new name in Scandinavian thriller fiction with his breakthrough novel, THE SHREW IN KRAKÓW (1997). The novel has since been sold to Norway, Sweden, Germany, and Holland.

THE SHREW IN KRAKÓW introduced Jan Jordi Kazanski, a CIA agent of mixed Polish and Spanish descent, living in Madrid after having lost his wife and daughter in a work-related tragedy in Moscow. The novel saw Kazanski through an action-packed adventure in Kraków, Poland, where he met and was attracted to Ewa Siwonia, the daughter of the mysterious shrew in Kraków.

THE JESTER IN MURMANSK (1999) takes place in the frostbitten city of Murmansk. Lying in the shadow of one of the greatest environmental hazards in the world – Russia's rusting nuclear fleet – the city at the end of the world becomes a theatre of high-stakes powerplay between three nations with one man – Kazanski - caught in the middle. THE JESTER IN MURMANSK has been sold to Norway, Sweden, Italy, and Holland.

THE WOLF IN BANJA LUKA (2002) takes Jan Jordi Kazanski on his final and most dangerous mission. Ewa Siwonia has disappeared somewhere in the Balkans while on a secret mission for the International Criminal Court in the Hague. Forced to take over Ewa's mission, Kazanski begins a perilous journey through the war-torn landscapes of Croatia, Kosovo and Bosnia-Herzegovina with the most important goal in his life: to find Ewa alive.

JENS HENRIK JENSEN'S spy novels featuring CIA agent Jan Jordi Kazanski are based on extensive background research as well as personal travels in countries like Spain, Russia and Poland (The Shrew in Kraków), Norway, Sweden and Russia (The Jester in Murmansk), and Croatia, Kosovo, Albania and Bosnia-Herzegovina (The Wolf in Banja Luka).
